Jed Stone, Frillby United:

«Slippery Sam's Emporium Skelsthorpe.

Sam had no real idea as to where he cellar actually was. Descending the stairs took him somewhere else. Just where he wasn't sure. The door at the foot of the stairs looked wooden but wasn't. It was metal and beyond it was a very large sound proof cellar. It had to be sound proofed as beyond it a loud speaker was solemnly intoning Vogon poetry. It was done, he had been told to keep the Vogon workers happy but, in his opinion, it was to sterilise the area. No mouse, rat or germ could exist long in the same space as Vogon poetry. The far wall of the cellar, instead of being brick now opened up on the blackness of space. Against a back drop of stars a Vogon freighter could be clearly seen. A smaller transport was heading towards the ex-wall. Sam headed back up the stairs. He would return when they had finished unloading and clear away the dead creatures. As he moved away from the window a small white mouse with a set of 'Cosy Comfort' Ear Muffs firmly covering his large pink ears peeped out from behind a pile of boxes.

Slippery Sam unlocked the shop door. Outside a small group of Slarty Boys were re-enacting Slartibartfast's 4 - 0 victory over Castle United using a tin can and coat goalposts. Unfortunately, with no VAR or referee to clarify matters Castle's fifth goal was under dispute and likely to lead to on field violence. Sam pulled his ref's whistle out of his pocket and dived into the fray, mainly to stop his window being broken by Slarty Boys yet again.»
